

HOW ARE THE CHILDREN?

Even the bravest warriors of the Masai African tribe use
"Kasserian ingera" as their traditional greeting to ask first and foremost:
"How are the children?"

This reflects the high priority placed on the well-being of the tribe's youngest members and their awareness of the interrelation between children's well-being and that of the overall tribe.

What can and should we do on a daily basis, especially in these turbulent times to be able to answer: "All the children are well."?
